

Alvidar Use for Hypothyroidism

Improper Thyroid Function Explanation

Improper thyroid function is generally due to autoimmune response by the body. This is where the body's immune system produces antibodies which attack the gland and then cause hormone production to be upset.

Improper thyroid function is mostly caused by low iodine within the thyroid gland. It is often misdiagnosed as depression, PMS, poor diet, or several other conditions. Improper thyroid function occurs when your thyroid gland doesn't produce enough thyroid hormone. If your body isn't producing enough thyroid hormone, you can experience some of the symptoms listed below.

Symptoms of Improper Thyroid Function

- Have problems losing weight and seem to gain weight without reason.
- You feel tired and weak.
- You are depressed and moody.
- Your hair is dry and rough.
- You become cold easily; being in cold weather is painful.
- You are often constipated.
- Your skin is dry and pale.
- You are easily irritated.
- You have problems remembering and concentrating
- You have irregular menstrual cycles.
- You have a decreased interest in sex.
- You have muscle and/or joint pain.
- Your fingernails may be thin and brittle.
- Your face, hands, and feet are often swollen or puffy.
